Kazakhstan Participated in the Moscow Format Consultations on Afghanistan

06.10.2026

Special Representative of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan for Afghanistan Yerkin Tukumov took part in the 8th meeting of the Moscow Format Consultations on Afghanistan at the level of special representatives and senior officials. The participants discussed the political and economic situation in Afghanistan, regional security issues, counterterrorism and combating illicit drug trafficking, as well as further prospects for engagement with Kabul. Y.Tukumov noted the positive dynamics of trade and economic cooperation and its interest in further expanding trade, industrial cooperation and transport connectivity. Kazakhstan also emphasized the importance of continuing humanitarian support for Afghanistan. In June of this year, approximately 319 tonnes of humanitarian aid were sent to the country, including 161,000 units of medicines and medical devices. The ongoing practical cooperation in combating drug trafficking was noted, including the training of Afghan canine specialists and the transfer of service dogs. In view of the continuing disagreements between the Afghan and Pakistani sides, the participants were unable to agree on a final joint statement. At the same time, the parties reaffirmed the relevance of the Moscow Format as a platform for regional dialogue and coordination of cooperation on issues of peace, security and development in Afghanistan. In January—July 2026, trade turnover with Afghanistan amounted to USD 581.1 million, increasing 2.4 times. Particular attention was paid to the development of regional transport corridors and the participation of Kazakh businesses in infrastructure projects.

Digital Silk Road: Kazakhstan Brings Together Technology, Infrastructure and Capital to Reach Global Markets

Zhaslan Madiyev, Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Artificial Intelligence and Digital Development of the Republic of Kazakhstan, has signed a memorandum of strategic cooperation between the Astana International Financial Centre, Kazakhtelecom Joint Stock Company, Balaji Srinivasan's Network School, and Shervin Pishevar together with Sofreh Capital, Edison and Alpha. The memorandum provides for building an ecosystem in Kazakhstan that brings together computing capacity, international capital, engineering expertise and an industrial base. The partnership aims to create conditions in which Kazakh and international teams can develop technologies, launch manufacturing and build companies for the global market. The signing of the memorandum was preceded by a statement from Shervin Pishevar at the AI & Digital Bridge 2026 international forum. Speaking at the session THE NEW ECONOMY: POWERED BY AI, the investor announced his intention to open offices in Kazakhstan, relocate his company here and invest in the country's development. Among Kazakhstan's advantages, he cited its engineering talent, government support for innovation, and its industrial and resource base, and pointed to the success of Higgsfield as an example of international recognition of Kazakhstan's technological potential. The partnership also builds on Kazakhstan's existing cooperation with Network School. Balaji Srinivasan's Network School project has already begun operating in Kazakhstan. With the launch of the initiative, more than 240 members of his team and of the international tech community arrived in the country. The memorandum sets out the areas for further joint work — from training specialists and attracting international teams to creating companies, financing them, developing infrastructure and deploying technologies in industry. The memorandum's central infrastructure pillar is the Digital Silk Road joint venture. Sofreh Capital, the investment holding company founded by Shervin Pishevar, will serve as a founding partner of the Digital Silk Road joint venture. In collaboration with the Ministry and Kazakhstani partners, Sofreh will lead the structuring of the venture, attract international capital and technology partners, and help develop Digital Silk Road into an integrated AI infrastructure company connecting data centers, space-based computing infrastructure, satellites, and the Trans-Caspian Fiber-Optic Cable Line. The memorandum's central infrastructure pillar is the Digital Silk Road project. The memorandum establishes a framework for developing new technology industries in Kazakhstan and bringing the infrastructure projects already under way into a single ecosystem. These include computing capacity and data centers, telecommunications and space infrastructure, robotics and Physical AI, new energy solutions, critical materials, and the attraction of international technology capital. These areas are viewed as building blocks of a new economy capable of creating products and technologies in Kazakhstan for the global market. "Kazakhstan has the resources, the expertise and the scale of projects to become one of the world's technology powers. To that end, the Head of State has made the development of a new economy a national priority, with a targeted allocation of financial, infrastructure and human resources. We are already advancing major projects — the Data Center Valley and the Trans-Caspian Fiber-Optic Cable Line — developing the space industry and laying the foundation for new technology manufacturing. "One of the key areas is the AI token economy, in which our energy resources are converted into computing capacity, and computing into artificial intelligence services for the global market. We see AI tokens as the future 'currency of access to intelligence': Kazakhstan can become a major producer and exporter of this new digital resource, generating high added value on the basis of its own energy potential. "Another strategic area is Physical AI — artificial intelligence that controls robots, equipment and autonomous systems in the real world. Our mining, metallurgy and other industries give us a competitive advantage: industrial data and real-world sites on which, together with leading technology companies, we can build industry-specific AI models and bring these solutions to the global market. "New opportunities are also opening up in space technologies and commercial launches, the processing of critical minerals for semiconductors and batteries, the crypto industry, autonomous transport and the low-altitude economy. Alatau City and the international IT talent ecosystem should become magnets for entrepreneurs, engineers and capital, driving the development of these industries. "By bringing these areas together, we can build the Digital Silk Road, along which Kazakhstan will supply computing, technologies and intelligent products to global markets. The vehicle for implementing this strategy could be an international AI technology holding capable of uniting key projects, attracting large-scale capital and creating joint ventures with global technology leaders. Our ambition is to build on this foundation a global business with a market capitalization of over $100 billion that will strengthen Kazakhstan's technological standing and create new sources of long-term prosperity for the country," said Zhaslan Madiyev, Deputy Prime Minister — Minister of Artificial Intelligence and Digital Development. Kazakhstan's industrial base makes it possible to position the country as a platform for developing, testing and scaling such technologies. The cooperation envisages exploring pilot projects, testing grounds, robot assembly and component manufacturing. Other promising areas include space technologies, small-scale nuclear energy, quantum computing and new materials. The financial component of the partnership provides for exploring the establishment of a venture fund in the AIFC jurisdiction to invest in companies operating in Kazakhstan or basing their business here. Any participation by national development institutions will be determined by those institutions independently, in accordance with established procedures. In parallel, the parties plan to establish a venture studio affiliated with Sofreh Capital to systematize the incubation of new entities as well as a Kazakhstan arm of the Alpha platform to launch and grow new companies. "Kazakhstan is interested not only in attracting capital, but also in creating conditions in which international technology companies and investors can build long-term projects here. The AIFC provides the legal and financial infrastructure needed for this. Our task is to serve as a bridge between international capital and Kazakhstan's investment opportunities," said Renat Bekturov, Governor of the AIFC. A key role in this part of the cooperation belongs to Kazakhtelecom JSC, the national telecom operator and a company of the Samruk-Kazyna Sovereign Wealth Fund group. The company owns and operates Kazakhstan's backbone fiber-optic infrastructure and data center network, and represents the Kazakh side in the construction of the Trans-Caspian Fiber-Optic Cable Line as part of Digital Silk Way. "We are building a Data Center Valley and AI infrastructure with a capacity of hundreds of megawatts. Kazakhtelecom has an extensive communications infrastructure, including the Trans-Caspian fiber-optic line. But Kazakhstan's potential is far greater. "If all of this is brought together into a single system, backed by large-scale venture investment and strong technological expertise, an entirely new picture of the future could emerge. In the long term, we can even talk about launching data centers into space from Kazakhstan. But to get there, it is important to move systematically, step by step," said Bagdat Mussin, Chairman of the Management Board of Kazakhtelecom JSC. Another area of cooperation is the development of trusted supply chains for the AI industry and advanced technologies. The parties intend to facilitate investment in automation, robotics and Physical AI, the space industry, quantum computing, energy and the critical materials sector. The training of specialists for these new areas is to be developed with the participation of Network School. The approach is built on the practical skills that technology companies need, engagement with Kazakhstan's universities and research organizations, and support for the commercialization of research and development. "Shervin Pishevar has invested in dozens of unicorns, including Uber, Airbnb, Slack, Instacart, and Doordash. He's setting up Sofreh Capital in Kazakhstan to help incubate the Digital Silk Road JV as well as other companies in the broader Central Asian region. We'll collaborate with him and the government of Kazakhstan to help recruit and train any talent they need, from Kazakhstan and from around the world," said Balaji Srinivasan, founder of Network School (ns.com).

As part of the cooperation, the partners also intend to build infrastructure that will enable entrepreneurs to launch companies directly from Kazakhstan. Shervin Pishevar announced plans, together with Balaji Srinivasan, to help attract up to 10,000 new entrepreneurs to the country and to provide them with the infrastructure to launch companies. "Kazakhstan has everything it takes to lead the AI age: world-class human capital, a highly educated workforce, extraordinary natural resources, and the leadership, ambition, drive and work ethic to build at global scale. Together with our partners, we are launching the Digital Silk Road, a joint venture to build Eurasia's leading AI infrastructure company integrating AI compute, power and connectivity infrastructure linking data centers, space data centers, satellites and the Trans-Caspian fiber-optic network. We will promote frontier technologies spanning automation, robotics, physical intelligence, nuclear power, space, quantum computing and critical materials sectors in Kazakhstan. We will build a vertically integrated full stack of the new economy: AI data centers on the ground and in orbit, space launch and satellite manufacturing, and the energy and computing of the future, from small modular and micro-nuclear reactors to quantum computing. We are also launching a Kazakhstan venture fund and venture studios, so that global companies can be invented and built right here in Kazakhstan. And with Balaji Srinivasan and the Network School, we aim to bring 10,000 entrepreneurs to Kazakhstan and give them everything they need to build the next Higgsfield, the world-class AI company born here. For Kazakhstan, the sky is no longer the limit. It is the stars" said Shervin Pishevar. The memorandum also provides for a phased exploration of basing the Pishevar group's investment operations in the AIFC and of bringing its portfolio companies, employees and teams to Kazakhstan. Decisions on establishing a presence will be made by each company independently. Within 100 days of signing, the parties intend to agree on a plan for implementing the cooperation. The memorandum is a framework document: specific projects, investment volumes and the terms of each party's participation will be determined by separate agreements.

The sides highly assessed the outcomes of the recent meeting between President of the Republic of Kazakhstan Kassym-Jomart Tokayev and Prime Minister of India Narendra Modi on the sidelines of the 18th BRICS Summit in New Delhi, which provided new impetus to bilateral cooperation. The parties emphasized the importance of implementing the agreements reached in the areas of energy, digitalization, high technologies, and creative industries. Particular attention was paid to strengthening cooperation between Kazakhstan and India on multilateral platforms, including the Conference on Interaction and Confidence-Building Measures in Asia (CICA). Following the meeting, the sides reaffirmed their readiness to continue efforts to strengthen the Kazakhstan—India strategic partnership.

The Agreement on Economic Partnership between the EAEU and the UAE Has Entered into Force

06.10.2026

On October 6, 2026, the Agreement on Economic Partnership between the Eurasian Economic Union and its Member States, on the one hand, and the United Arab Emirates, on the other hand (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement"), entered into force. Reference: The Agreement was signed on June 27, 2025, in St. Petersburg. The Agreement was ratified by the Law of the Republic of Kazakhstan dated July 8, 2026, No. 338-VIII ZRK. The main objective of the Agreement is the mutual elimination and reduction of import customs duties on more than 85% of the product nomenclature, as well as the facilitation of trade between the parties. The opening of the Emirati market will enable Kazakhstani exporters to supply the UAE duty-free with such categories of agricultural and industrial products as lamb, dried leguminous vegetables, chicken meat, beef, other food products, sweetened mineral water, wheat flour, and confectionery products. Industrial goods include oil and petroleum products, refined copper, hot-rolled flat products, cold-rolled flat products, bars, cranes, valves, parts of machinery and equipment, pumps, and others. In addition to the elimination and reduction of import customs duties, the Agreement contains provisions on customs cooperation, trade remedies, rules of origin, technical barriers to trade (TBT), sanitary and phytosanitary measures (SPS), intellectual property, as well as relevant chapters on legal and institutional matters and agreements aimed at developing sectoral cooperation, enhancing interaction between small and medium-sized enterprises, e-commerce, and other areas. The establishment of a comprehensive preferential trade regime and the regulation of a broad range of issues under the Agreement will help unlock the potential of mutual trade and bring Kazakhstan—UAE trade and economic relations to a qualitatively new level. Kazakhstan's Cross-Border Hubs Are Emerging as New Trade and Logistics Centers

Work on developing cross-border trade and logistics hubs in Kazakhstan is continuing and gradually moving from the planning stage to concrete implementation. The focus is no longer limited to building infrastructure along the borders: projects are now moving into the construction of production facilities, attraction of investment, launch of new logistics capacities and the development of initial cargo flows. The Ministry of Trade and Integration is coordinating work on five key hubs designed to strengthen Kazakhstan's trade ties with Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Russia, China and the Caspian region. Their development is expected to streamline logistics procedures for businesses and contribute to increasing non-commodity exports to 30%. The most visible progress is being made in the eastern direction. At the Khorgos — Eastern Gate Special Economic Zone (SEZ), the number of projects has increased from 14 in 2022 to 69, while the volume of attracted investment has grown from KZT 340 billion to KZT 652.8 billion. Today, 40 projects worth KZT 75 billion are being implemented, creating 864 jobs. In the first half of 2026 alone, nine new participants were registered, with investments totaling KZT 9.3 billion and 230 jobs to be created. During the same period, the value of manufactured products reached KZT 12.7 billion, up 74% compared with the same period in 2025. The infrastructure at Khorgos is also expanding. The SEZ already has an inland dry port with an annual capacity of 540,000 containers, as well as a 25,000-square-metre Class A warehouse complex. Two more major logistics projects are currently at the design stage. By 2028, 28 projects worth KZT 577.7 billion are planned for implementation, creating around 2,800 jobs. Among the largest initiatives are the Kazakhstan—China International Industrial City industrial park, valued at KZT 330 billion, and an international passenger and cargo airport worth KZT 250 billion. In southern Kazakhstan, projects are also moving into practical implementation. At the Central Asia International Center for Industrial Cooperation, fencing of the 100-hectare site has been completed, while internal roads and engineering infrastructure are under construction. External construction and installation works have been completed, and commissioning activities are now underway. Internal engineering infrastructure is 55% complete, with the remaining works scheduled for completion in December 2026. The local akimat has already fully completed the construction of eight production buildings, while the investment project pipeline for the center has reached KZT 89.4 billion. Construction has already begun on one of the largest projects — an industrial park worth KZT 75.3 billion. In the Zhambyl Region, the Industrial Trade and Logistics Complex was granted Special Economic Zone status in April 2026. A 165-hectare site has been allocated for the project, and a programme for connecting the complex to engineering networks has been developed. Construction of the first-stage substation began this year. Of the KZT 12 billion allocated for these purposes, around KZT 4 billion has been provided in 2026, with the remaining funds planned for next year. At the same time, preparations for the site and the complex's infrastructure are continuing. The western direction is also undergoing active development. The Eurasia Cross-Border Trade Center in the West Kazakhstan Region covers 281 hectares. Part of the external engineering infrastructure has already been completed, including gas, electricity, water supply and wastewater systems. Projects are being implemented in the industrial zone for the production of asphalt concrete, recycling of automotive tires, manufacturing of aerated concrete products and construction of a gas-turbine power plant. At the same time, work is underway to establish the Eurasia Special Economic Zone, which is expected to create additional conditions for attracting investment and localizing production. The Caspian region is seeing its own progress. Practical operations at the Aktau International Container Hub have already begun at the Port of Aktau: the first container train arrived on July 14, 2026. To date, 233 containers, equivalent to 444 TEUs, have been received. The project is being implemented in stages and is expected to increase the port's annual container handling capacity to 240,000 TEUs, compared with the current 70,000 TEUs. Another major facility in the Caspian hub is the container terminal at the ERSAI Industrial Port. Construction is approximately 85% complete. Ten kilometers of internal port railway tracks have already been built, while the container yard and crane tracks are nearing completion. The terminal is scheduled to be commissioned on October 1, 2026. Once it reaches full capacity, it will be able to handle up to 120,000 TEUs annually and accommodate up to 300 vessels per year. Private investment in the project exceeds KZT 15 billion. Overall, the five cross-border hubs are gradually forming an integrated infrastructure network designed to connect Kazakh businesses with the major markets of neighboring countries. In some locations, production facilities are already operating; in others, the first container trains have arrived, while elsewhere engineering infrastructure is nearing completion and construction of new facilities is getting underway. The next stage will be to bring these projects to full capacity, expand the investor base and further increase trade and transit volumes across Kazakhstan's borders.

Customs value control: in which cases documents and information are checked

06.10.2026

One of the key areas of customs control is the control of the customs value of goods, since it is the customs value that is the basis for calculating customs duties, taxes and other mandatory payments. At the same time, the verification of documents and information on the customs value is not carried out for every declaration of goods. Control is carried out using a risk management system that allows you to identify supplies that require additional verification, and at the same time minimize the administrative burden on bona fide participants in foreign economic activity. Verification of documents and information on the customs value is appointed if there are signs of a possible false declaration of the customs value. In particular, the basis for conducting an inspection may be identified discrepancies between the submitted documents, a significant deviation of the declared value from the value of identical or similar goods, the absence of documentary evidence of individual components of the customs value, as well as other circumstances indicating possible non-compliance with the requirements of customs legislation. Special attention is paid to the completeness of the formation of the customs value structure. The customs authorities verify the correctness of the inclusion in the customs value of transportation costs, insurance, royalties and other charges, which, in accordance with the legislation, are subject to accounting when determining the customs value of goods. At the same time, the customs legislation of the Eurasian Economic Union provides for mechanisms to simplify customs administration. Thus, verification of documents and information on the customs value may not be carried out with respect to identical goods imported under the same foreign trade agreement, if earlier for a similar delivery the customs authority had already confirmed the authenticity of the declared customs value using the transaction value method for imported goods (method

1). In order to apply this mechanism, the conditions established by law must be observed at the same time. In particular, the goods must be imported under the same foreign trade agreement as the previously issued delivery, and the declared customs value must be determined by the same method — according to the transaction value of the imported goods. In addition, the essential terms of the transaction that affect the formation of the customs value must remain unchanged, including the price of the goods, the commercial terms of sale, the terms of delivery and the settlement procedure between the parties. It is also a prerequisite that there are no new circumstances that could affect the value of the customs value or raise doubts about the accuracy of the information provided. The goods declaration must contain information about a previously completed delivery, for which the customs authority has already confirmed the customs value. This allows the customs authority to compare the data of the current delivery with previously verified information and decide not to apply additional verification measures. It should be borne in mind that even if these conditions are met, the customs authority has the right to conduct an inspection if, within the framework of the risk management system, signs of a possible violation of customs legislation are identified or information appears indicating the unreliability of the declared data. Thus, the exemption from verification is not unconditional and is applied only in the absence of risk factors. This approach makes it possible to focus control measures on shipments that show signs of risk, while simultaneously speeding up customs clearance for bona fide participants in foreign economic activity. Thus, the application of a risk management system ensures a balance between effective customs control and the creation of favorable conditions for conducting foreign economic activity, as well as contributes to increasing transparency and predictability of customs administration.

Constitutional Court of the Republic of Kazakhstan: Disagreement with Judicial Decisions Does Not Constitute Grounds for Constitutional Review

07.10.2026

The Constitutional Court considered a petition seeking review of Article 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code of the Republic of Kazakhstan, which defines the powers of an investigating judge, for its conformity with the Constitution. The petitioner argued that the challenged provision precludes the possibility of judicial protection at the stage preceding the registration of a report in the Unified Register of Pre-Trial Investigations. The Constitutional Court established that the reason for returning the complaint to the petitioner without consideration was the absence of initiated pre-trial proceedings. The courts proceeded from the position that, at that stage, there was no subject matter for judicial review as provided for by criminal procedure legislation. The Constitutional Court noted that everyone's right to judicial protection is exercised in accordance with the procedures and forms established by law. The Constitution does not prescribe specific types or forms of judicial protection, leaving their determination to the legislature. At the same time, the petitioner's arguments sought an assessment of whether the courts had correctly applied the provisions of criminal procedure legislation and, in substance, expressed disagreement with the judicial decisions rendered. Review of the legality and validity of judicial decisions does not fall within the competence of the Constitutional Court. In view of the above, the Court concluded that there were no legal grounds for admitting the petition for constitutional proceedings.

Recreational Load on Protected Natural Areas: Preserving the Natural Potential of East Kazakhstan

In East Kazakhstan, particular attention is paid to the development of ecotourism while ensuring the conservation of natural ecosystems. One of the tools for regulating tourist pressure is the Methodology for Determining the Permissible Recreational Load and Tourist-Recreational Capacity of Specially Protected Natural Areas (SPNAs), developed by the Forestry and Wildlife Committee of the Ministry of Ecology and Natural Resources of the Republic of Kazakhstan with the participation of scientific organizations and experts. How the Permissible Load Is Determined The methodology makes it possible to determine the permissible number of visitors for specific tourist routes, ecological trails, observation platforms and recreational areas, taking into account the natural conditions of the territory. The calculations take into account: the type of terrain and relief features; slope steepness; the stability of the soil and vegetation cover; the area and length of the tourist route; seasonal characteristics of the territory; the availability and condition of tourist infrastructure; the need to ensure comfortable conditions for visitors. The permissible recreational load is determined taking into account the basic and actual recreational capacity of the territory. Reduction coefficients are applied to account for the specific natural and infrastructure conditions of each site. Monitoring the Condition of Natural Areas Determining the permissible load is part of the environmental monitoring system. Key sections of tourist routes are monitored to assess the condition of the natural environment. If signs of increased anthropogenic pressure are identified, appropriate measures may be taken, including reducing the number of visitors, regulating access, and temporarily restricting the use of individual sections of a route to allow the natural vegetation cover to recover. Ecotourism in East Kazakhstan There are 42 tourist routes in the East Kazakhstan Region, 24 of which are ecological routes. The routes pass through specially protected natural areas, including the Katon-Karagay State National Nature Park, Markakol and West Altai State Nature Reserves. Compliance with the permissible recreational load makes it possible to combine the development of the tourism sector with the preservation of the region's natural and landscape potential. For East Kazakhstan, which has significant natural and tourism potential, this approach is an important condition for the sustainable development of ecotourism.

Addressing the Forum, Kassym-Jomart Tokayev noted that the high-level talks, held in an atmosphere of trust and deep mutual understanding, were open, frank and truly meaningful. The Head of State emphasized that further development of trade, economic and investment ties between Kazakhstan and Oman requires strengthening the relevant legal and institutional framework. In this context, the President highlighted the importance of the Bilateral Investment Treaty, which is designed to provide investors with more predictable, transparent and secure conditions for project implementation. Particular attention in his speech was devoted to developing direct ties between the business communities of the two countries. "I strongly believe that the establishment of the Kazakhstan-Oman Business Council will create a practical platform for active engagement between business communities," Kassym-Jomart Tokayev said. The Head of State noted that the shared goals of Kazakhstan and Oman are backed by effective financial mechanisms. "We welcome the signing of the agreement to launch a Joint investment structure between Samruk-Kazyna and the Oman Investment Authority. As we have already noted, there is enormous potential for mutually beneficial cooperation between our countries that needs to be unlocked and fully realized," said Kassym-Jomart Tokayev. The President underscored that he would make every effort to ensure that Kazakhstan becomes a reliable partner for Oman. "Oman enjoys great respect in Kazakhstan. Today, many of our citizens visit your beautiful country. At the same time, there are also Kazakh people that have not yet visited Muscat and other cities in Oman. Naturally, with the launch of additional direct commercial flights between our countries, our citizens will visit your country much more frequently. I have also been informed that, as part of your visit, an important agreement concerning the Dunga oil field was signed. I believe this is further evidence of our mutual interest and readiness to move forward, as well as a symbol of our shared progress," noted President Tokayev. In turn, the Sultan of Oman expressed gratitude to the President of Kazakhstan for the hospitality extended to him. "Over the past three decades, our relations have indeed advanced significantly and grown stronger. Our visit today is aimed at consolidating the achievements we have made and bringing our bilateral relations to a new level. During the visit, we will sign several agreements and MoU. I am sure that, with your guidance, we will be able to build very strong relations in the economic, political, cultural and humanitarian spheres. We would like to see more and more citizens of Oman visit Kazakhstan, as well as more citizens of Kazakhstan travel to Oman. Allow me once again to thank you, Mr. President, for your hospitality. Al-Kuwait, 5 October 2026 — Ambassador of the Republic of Kazakhstan to the State of Kuwait Yerzhan Yelekeyev held a meeting with Shafi Al-Ajmi, President of Kuwait Petroleum International (KPI). During the meeting, the sides discussed prospects for developing bilateral cooperation in the oil and gas and petrochemical sectors, as well as potential areas for further practical engagement. Particular attention was paid to cooperation in the field of aviation fuel, including opportunities for interaction with Kazakh airlines and airports, as well as prospects for developing the Sustainable Aviation Fuel (SAF) sector. The sides also considered opportunities for cooperation in the retail distribution of petroleum products, including the development of modern filling stations and related infrastructure in Kazakhstan, taking into account KPI's international experience under the Q8 brand. Following the meeting, the sides agreed to continue jointly exploring specific areas and projects of mutual interest with the participation of relevant Kazakh organizations and companies. The meeting was part of the Embassy's ongoing efforts to expand practical cooperation between Kazakhstan and leading companies in Kuwait's oil and gas and petrochemical sectors, as well as to attract international expertise and new technologies to promising sectors of Kazakhstan's economy. AUTOMATIC GENERATION OF ZERO TAX RETURNS

The Zhetisu Regional Department of State Revenue reminds taxpayers that, effective January 1, 2026, a new procedure for filing tax returns is in effect in Kazakhstan. In accordance with the provisions of the Tax Code, once the deadline for filing tax returns has passed, the tax authority's information system automatically generates the corresponding tax returns with zero figures for that tax period. In light of this, taxpayers must specify in advance, via the "Taxpayer's Account" web application, which tax return forms are required to be filed. Steps to follow: Log in to the "Taxpayer's Account" web application (ISNA); Go to the "Tax Returns to Be Filed" section. Add the required tax return forms in accordance with the tax regime and type of activity; Specify the "year and tax period" for the start of submission for each FNO; Save the entered information. Note that the automatic generation of reports with zero figures does not exempt the taxpayer from the obligation to report actual tax liabilities. If, after the automatic generation of tax returns, the taxpayer actually had taxable items that must be reported in the tax returns, the taxpayer is required to file additional tax returns for the corresponding tax period. However, this procedure does not apply to tax returns filed by individuals for activities not related to their work as sole proprietors. Thus, the automatic generation of tax returns with zero figures is intended to simplify tax administration and reduce the administrative burden on taxpayers.

President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev: The "Washington Model" for AI Could Form the Basis of an International Treaty Under UN Auspices

06.10.2026

Kazakhstan is holding AI MONTH from September 23 to October 23 as part of the Year of Digitalization and Artificial Intelligence. The month-long program features a wide range of events dedicated to artificial intelligence and digital technologies, bringing together the tech community, businesses, educational institutions, startups, international experts and regional initiatives from across the country. The centerpiece of AI MONTH is the AI & Digital Bridge 2026 international technology forum, taking place in Astana from October 1 to 3. President of Kazakhstan Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, who attended the opening of the forum, emphasized that artificial intelligence should not be viewed as a replacement for human intelligence, but rather as a tool that complements it. According to the President, as technology advances at an ever-faster pace, critical thinking, the pursuit of knowledge and individual responsibility are becoming increasingly important. Regulatory requirements, he noted, should be stringent only where security and the vital interests of citizens are at stake, so as to ensure that promising talent and investment remain in the country. President Tokayev stressed that the ultimate objective is to translate technological progress into tangible benefits for every citizen of Kazakhstan. He proposed identifying real-world demand for AI solutions across the economy and launching an AI Challenge initiative, with the most promising solutions subsequently deployed in industry. At the same time, President Tokayev underscored the need for the highest degree of responsibility and integrity in the development of artificial intelligence. In this context, he welcomed President Donald Trump's initiative under which leading U.S. technology companies signed an accord setting out safety principles for the development of advanced AI systems. "There is no doubt that alongside huge opportunities, we will have to face many shakeups and even upheavals. Therefore, we must develop AI with full responsibility and integrity.

In this regard, I would like to commend the recent signing of the Superintelligence Accord by leading American tech companies under the leadership of President Trump. From my perspective, this approach could be regarded by all countries involved as a model to be adopted globally after serious considerations," Kassym-Jomart Tokayev noted. Later, speaking at the third meeting of the Council for the Development of Artificial Intelligence, President Tokayev said the Accord could also serve as a reference point in shaping approaches to AI governance. "The accord signed in Washington DC could be regarded by all countries involved as a model to be introduced worldwide in AI sector to be eventually passed after serious considerations by experts, and this "Washington Model" may become a core of an International Treaty under the auspices of the UN. Kazakhstan likewise supports the safe and responsible development of artificial intelligence. To this end, we are ready to serve as a platform for substantive international dialogue on these issues. Our Council has already proven its practical value. I therefore ask its members to promptly submit concrete proposals on Kazakhstan's international initiative in this area. Our common vision will be presented at the G20 Summit in Miami this December " stressed Tokayev. The plenary session of the AI & Digital Bridge 2026 international technology forum also featured prominent figures from the global technology and investment sectors, including William E. Ford, Chairman and CEO of General Atlantic; Rev Lebareadian, Vice President of Physical AI Simulation at NVIDIA; Balaji Srinivasan, founder of Network School; and Greg Wyler, founder of OneWeb and Founder, CEO and Chief Architect of E-Space. The third meeting of the Council for the Development of Artificial Intelligence likewise brought together a distinguished group of participants. Alongside senior Kazakh government officials, speakers included Kai-Fu Lee, Chairman and CEO of Sinovation Ventures and CEO of 01.AI; H.E. Mansoor Al Mansoori, Chairman of the Department of Health — Abu Dhabi and CEO of G42 International; Alexander Khanin, Founder and Director of Polynome Group; and Ya-Qin Zhang, Founding Dean of the Institute for AI Industry Research (AIR) at Tsinghua University.

Customs control after release of goods: release does not end the check

The Department of State Revenue for the Mangystau Region explains to foreign-trade operators how customs control is carried out after goods have been released. Release gives the right to use the goods under the declared customs procedure. It does not mean that verification of the declared data is finished. Customs authorities may still compare the declaration with documents, accounting records and actual transactions. The legal basis is the Customs Code of the Eurasian Economic Union and the Code of the Republic of Kazakhstan “On Customs Regulation in the Republic of Kazakhstan”. Under Article 310 of the EAEU Customs Code, control after the circumstances that end customs supervision may be carried out within the period set by the member state: as a general rule up to three years, and a member may provide for up to five years. In Kazakhstan the period is linked to the limitation periods in Articles 89 and 143 of the Customs Regulation Code: generally three years; five years for persons subject to tax monitoring, subsoil users in the fuel and energy sector, authorized economic operators, and in specific cases expressly provided by Article 89 for goods released for domestic consumption. The main form at this stage is the customs audit (Article 416). It is conducted after release and consists of comparing declaration data and submitted documents with accounting, reporting and other information obtained in the manner prescribed by law. An audit may be desk-based or on-site. A desk audit (Article 417) is carried out at the customs authority, without a visit: declarations, commercial, transport and other documents, and information-system data are examined. An on-site audit (Article 418) is carried out at the location of a legal entity, the place of business of an individual entrepreneur, or the place where the activity is actually conducted. Persons who may be audited include the declarant, the carrier, a person engaged in customs activities, an authorized economic operator, a person with rights in the goods after release, and a person who directly or indirectly took part in transactions with the goods. Typical points of review are the EAEU HS code, customs value, country of origin, quantity and characteristics, compliance with the customs procedure, prohibitions and restrictions, and the correct calculation and payment of customs duties, taxes, and special, anti-dumping and countervailing duties. Selection is risk-based. A bona fide operator should keep documents for the limitation period, answer requests on time, and not understate value or change the code or origin without supporting documents.

The Head of State noted Sultan Haitham bin Tariq Al Said's steadfast personal commitment to strengthening bilateral relations. “Your Majesty, you are a great statesman. Your far-sighted approach to governance and many years of service to your people command the deepest respect. The people of Kazakhstan hold you in the highest regard and take pride in being able to call Oman not only a partner, but also a friendly and brotherly state. By investing in human capital, embracing innovation and building a future-oriented economy, you demonstrate how strategic vision can transform a state and ensure its sustainable prosperity. During the talks, the Head of State welcomed the Sultan of Oman to Kazakhstan, noting that this was his first visit to Central Asia as Sultan. “We regard Oman as a time-tested and reliable partner of Kazakhstan in the Arab world. Next year, we will proudly mark a significant milestone – the 35th anniversary of diplomatic relations between Kazakhstan and Oman. Over this period, we have laid a solid foundation for transitioning to a new and dynamic stage of partnership, built on longstanding ties of friendship, mutual support and solidarity. The recent productive visit to Astana by a high-level Omani delegation led by Deputy Prime Minister for Economic Affairs Theyazin bin Haitham Al Said was a clear testament to the growing synergy between our countries,” the President of Kazakhstan said. The Head of State expressed confidence that the agreements reached would bring substantial benefits to the two brotherly peoples and elevate the strategic partnership to a new level. “Following the talks, we will sign a significant package of bilateral agreements covering various areas of economic cooperation, including energy, transport and logistics, agriculture, information technology and digitalization, healthcare, as well as other sectors. In addition, we will adopt a new Joint Statement outlining the priority areas of our partnership,” the President said. Kassym-Jomart Tokayev positively assessed the implementation of a number of joint projects, including the development of the Dunga oil field, enterprises of Solid-core Resources’ operations in the Pavlodar and North Kazakhstan regions, a Joint investment fund with the Oman Investment Authority, as well as the development of hotel and resort infrastructure. For his part, Sultan of Oman Haitham bin Tariq Al Said thanked Kassym-Jomart Tokayev for the warm welcome and successful talks, noting the steady development of comprehensive Kazakh-Omani cooperation. “Oman attaches great importance to its engagement with Kazakhstan. We welcome the momentum that bilateral cooperation has gained in recent years. High-level exchanges of visits, the work of the Joint Intergovernmental Commission have established a solid foundation that will enable us to take our cooperation to a more ambitious level,” the Sultan of Oman said. According to Haitham bin Tariq Al Said, Oman sees significant opportunities for growth, investment and cooperation with Kazakhstan across a range of sectors, including energy and mining, agriculture and food security, transport and logistics, financial services, tourism, technology and artificial intelligence. “We welcome the implementation of projects bringing together our sovereign investment institutions, private sectors and specialized government entities. Connectivity is another area of major importance. UIS women in the field of Abai in a profession that requires courage

In the women's penal colony in the Abai region, female employees, along with men, perform responsible official tasks on a daily basis, demonstrating a high level of professionalism, self-control and dedication to their chosen profession. Serving in the penitentiary requires deep knowledge, responsibility, psychological stability and the ability to make decisions in difficult situations. Today, women successfully serve in units that were traditionally considered male. In the operational department of the institution, four female employees serve, performing operational tasks, participating in preventive work and ensuring security. Four female employees also work in the security department, ensuring compliance with the established procedure and requirements of the regime. One example of professional excellence is the head of the security department, Balnur Akhmetkhanova, who has been serving in the penal system since April 2012. Over the years, she has gained significant experience and established herself as a competent leader. - Working in a women's colony requires full commitment, discipline and continuous improvement of professional skills. For me, service is an opportunity to honestly fulfill my duty and contribute to ensuring order and security," Balnur Akhmetkhanova said. The head of the operational Department, Captain of Justice Daria Muratbekovna Apisarovna, has 9 years of service experience and successfully leads the operational unit. Under her leadership, tasks are carried out to ensure a stable operational environment, prevent violations and maintain law and order. Operational work requires care, responsibility and the ability to make the right decisions. Abai Ainur Iskakova, a military police officer in the region, is a woman in uniform with a big heart

In the women's penal colony in the Abai region, supervision of convicted women is carried out by more than 40 employees aged 18 to 48 years. They ensure compliance with the detention regime, monitor the behavior of convicts and participate in educational and preventive work. Service requires high responsibility, endurance and professionalism. Thanks to their work, the institution maintains a stable operational environment and creates conditions for the correction and social adaptation of convicted women. Many female employees joined the service immediately after completing secondary education. Having started their professional career as supervisors, they acquired the necessary knowledge and practical experience, gradually moving up the career ladder and occupying senior positions. A striking example of such professional growth is the head of the department of educational and socio-psychological work among convicted women of the DUIS in the Abai region, Captain of Justice Ainur Asylkhanovna Iskakova. Ainur Asylkhanovna began her service in the Criminal Justice System in 2005 as a supervisor of the Supervisory Service Department. She worked in this position for about 13 years, having established herself as a responsible and disciplined employee. In 2018, she was appointed deputy assistant on duty to the head of the institution, and in 2021 she became the head of the department of educational and socio-psychological work among convicts. Thanks to her accumulated experience, professionalism and organizational skills, she was appointed head of the same department in 2026. Over the years of service, Ainur Asylkhanovna has made a significant contribution to the organization of educational work with convicted women. Under her leadership, a set of measures is being carried out aimed at shaping law-abiding behavior, developing social skills and preparing convicts for life after release. Colleagues note her responsiveness, integrity and sincere interest in the fate of people. Ainur Asylkhanovna always strives to help convicts embark on the path of correction, keep in touch with their relatives and friends, as well as solve emerging social issues. In her opinion, the effectiveness of educational work largely depends on the ability to listen to a person, support them and help them maintain socially useful ties with their family. This approach contributes to the successful correction and further social adaptation of convicts. An illustrative example of Ainur Iskakova's work was the situation when, with her assistance, the sister of one of the convicts was able to take custody of her 12-year-old daughter. Thanks to the timely assistance provided, the child was not sent to a children's institution and remained brought up with relatives. This case proved that the employee's caring and professional approach help maintain family ties even in difficult life circumstances. As a sign of appreciation for the attention, support and fair treatment, on the eve of the celebration of the Day of the Kazakh Police, the convicts presented Ainur Asylkhanovna with an unusual gift — a portrait made with their own hands. This gift became a symbol of respect and gratitude for her many years of hard work, humanity and contribution to the process of convict correction. Today, Ainur Iskakova is an example of dedication to her chosen cause, professional growth and service to people. Her life path proves that conscientious work, responsibility and a sincere desire to help can change people's destinies for the better.

An honest city begins with each of us

When we speak of combat-ing corruption, it often seems as though this is solely the domain of law enforcement agencies, civil servants, or officials in leadership roles.

In reality, it is much more than that. It is a matter of fairness, trust, and the quality of our daily lives. Each of us wants to live in a city where issues are re-solved according to the law rather than through personal connections; where public services are delivered with the same high quality to ev-eryone; where entrepreneurs can operate in an environment of fair competition; and where decisions made by of-ficials are guided by the law and the public interest, not by personal gain. That is pre-cisely why combating cor-ruption is a fundamental pri-ority in our work. Public trust cannot be built through re-ports and statistics alone. It is forged when a person visits a government agency and en-counters openness, respect, and equal treatment for all—and when they understand the reasoning behind a par-ticular decision.
